WOMEN OF THE BIBLE

THE LINE OF CHRIST

Women of the Bible: The Line of Christ in production at IMM

Missionary production house, International Media Ministries begins the next story in the series of the Women of the Bible: "Tamar, a Life Recovered," based on Genesis 38 this fall. IMM is seeking funding for a matching grant to fund the production.

IMM's goal is to reach out to Muslim women, victims of human trafficking, and women in harsh situations thru this series. Many women are hurting and are simply searching for love and peace in their lives.

The scripts are developed to dramatize the stories of real women from biblical times. The situations and circumstances of ancient women often reflect the news of today.

Kerry Godwin, Art Director of the project said, "I am amazed at the parallel of the biblical stories written thousands of years ago and the headlines in war torn areas of the world and places where honor killings are still occurring today. God has this right there in his book as material to speak to people even today."

Women of the Bible's pilot story "Ruth, a Life Regained," has already been broadcast to millions over one Middle East network and another is scheduled soon. Spanish and Arabic versions are in distribution now. The English version is in pre-production and other language groups are in discussion. Each language can cost up to or more than $8,000.

The next story "Rahab, a Life Reclaimed," is in post-production now and demonstrates how God can use outcast people and even a prostitute in His plans. Rahab will be able available for distribution later this year.

Broadcast partners of IMM have emphasized the importance of women's issues and their need for programming that addresses these themes. Based in Madrid, Spain IMM is able to take a multi-cultural approach to the stories.

Producer of the project, Denise M. Godwin said, "I know God loves and wants to reach out to women who have been told by society or circumstances that they have no value. In God's eyes they are cherished creatures and I want to make sure they hear that story."

Women of the Bible: the Line of Christ is in the process of gaining funding and endorsements.

People interested in being part of funding this project can contact IMM directly or donate online: <http://imm.edu/donate>, designating #42 for Women of the Bible.
